

BRIAN WALSH

Brian Walsh is an activist theologian and a retired campus minister. He was formerly the CRC Campus Minister at the University of Toronto, and the pastor of the "Wine Before Breakfast" community at Wycliffe College. He engages issues of theology and culture, and has written several books on them.

Selected Quotations

- "When grace is replaced by greed, and generosity is displaced by avarice, there is no limit to the depths of evil that can result."
- "But the dream of creational dancing in respectful harmony has devolved into the disrespectful and destructive nightmare of ecological devastation. And we know that this nightmare has everything to do with one particular dancer in the cosmic ballet. Humans. When creation dreams become ecological nightmares, it is invariably the human creature who is at the heart of it all."
- "A cold commodity culture in which everything is reduced to its market value will blasphemously obscure our vision that "all this earth is hallowed ground."
- "The hope for homecoming is constitutive of the human condition. Like grass rising through cement, it will irrepressibly emerge and animate human action against all odds."
